Dear Frank:

The last time that you visited us at [redacted] you aroused my curiosity to the boiling point by mentioning the flat spiral which you had seen in a report in Washington.

You also indicated at that time the possibility of getting us further specific information on the spiral and the further possibility of getting us some funds to build and independently evaluate this antenna. I would appreciate it very much if something along these lines could be done although I do realize that there is no immediate direct application to the systems which we are working on. For future reference, however, should this spiral meet the specifications that you mentioned, it would be of inestimable value for many [redacted] applications. This, of course, is nothing new to you.

If nothing can be done financially, I would still like to obtain further technical information if possible.

Sincerely yours
